ANCHORAGE, Alaska -- Dozens of volunteers are sprucing up the Fairview Lions Park today as part of the United Way's 'Day of Caring.' This is the United Way's 50th year in Anchorage and to celebrate it's taking on a project to renovate the park.

Volunteers from local companies and churches are weeding flower and sand boxes, laying brick for a new patio and building community gardens.

Cindy Curtis with United Way says, though the volunteers will be tired, they will be appreciative of the work they've done for others. (Phil Walczak/KTUU-TV)

The day of caring is actually a two day event, which ends tomorrow night.

"Well, probably very, very tired, probably very sore, but on the other hand it's going to feel like a real sense of accomplishment and just a real sense of satisfaction giving back to the Fairview community," said Cindy Curtis, United Way.

Similar projects are happening at the Fairview Recreation Center and the Anchorage Senior Center.
